The torture of prisoners by both sides is admitted by Gen. Villa and Gen. Salazar. Captured soldiers have been stripped of clothing and strapped to the backs of ponies and burned into the desert to die of thirst, horse and rider alike. Others have had noses, ears and limbs cut off, or eyes gouged out and left to die in their helplessness and misery. Many of the Mexicans are still barbarians.

ABOUT LOCAL NEWSPAPERS

Conservative Was First Paper Published Here After The War.

MANY CHANGES IN NAMES.

Ups and Downs, Failures and Successes For Fifty Years.

Somewhere about 300 years ago the poet wrote "there's nothing in a name, a rose by any other name would smell as sweet," but somehow the world hardly believes it. Even the biographers have never been able to agree as to how the immortal dramatist's and poet's name should be spelled, and change after change has been made.

The whirligig of time has wrought many changes in Hopkinsville, and the newspapers of the city have experienced to a considerable degree these mutations.

In 1865 the "Hopkinsville Conservative" was established by Dodd & Van Bussum, two practical printers from Henderson, the former being the editor. The newcomers had the substantial support of the politicians and the paper was "born with a silver spoon in its mouth." Hon. B. C. Ritter, the most influential man in the city and county, easily rode over all opposition in the Congressional district and was elected to Congress, all the time feeding the "Conservative" until it was able to provide for itself.

The Conservative stuck to its name until 1876, when it was changed to "The Democrat," the original name being entirely out of date and not at all appropriate to the political conditions of the day. "The Democrat" was published by Dodd & Walis for one year when the latter retired and Col. Dodd continued its publication for about two years, when he sold the paper and plant to Wilgus & Townes.

The first thing the new owners did was to change the name of the publication to "The South Kentuckian." The paper under its new name increased the subscription list and advertising patronage very materially, but journalistic work not being to Mr. Townes' taste, after running some months, the paper again changed hands, Meacham & Wilgus becoming the owners. The former assuming editorial control and the latter taking charge of the business department. "The South Kentuckian," soon made long strides in the way of prosperity and influence; fighting for the triumph of the Democratic party over the corrupt Republican county organization, it caused the political pot to boil with a fervency hitherto unknown and unifying the Democracy to an extent that had never been dreamed of.

Meacham & Wilgus continued to run the paper until 1887, when Mr. Meacham took the California fever, and another change of ownership took place, Mr. Meacham selling his interest to Mr. Wilgus and removing with his family to San Diego, Cal., where he filled a position on the staff of the Daily San Diegan for about one year.

After Mr. Meacham left The South Kentuckian, John O. Rust, previously editor of The New Era, took editorial charge of the paper, but not long thereafter, having made up his mind to study for the ministry, he severed his connection and entered the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville.

Mr. Rust was succeeded by A. M. Wallis, who remained on the paper until another change in ownership, which occurred December 4th, 1888.

Mr. Meacham returned from California and had about made up his

SHALL THE CONSTITUTION RULE?

Sec 156—The cities and towns of this commonwealth, for the purposes of their organization and government, shall be divided into six classes. * * * to the third class, cities with a population of 8,000 or more, and less than 21,000. (Population of Hopkinsville 1912, 10,146.)

The one argument that will in the end be relied upon by the non-progressive element in Hopkinsville, within the Democratic party, to defeat the movement to put the city in its constitutional class, will be that a rule of the people will turn the city over to the Republican party. In answer to this claim, the following analysis of the votes cast in Hopkinsville for the past several years; taking the head of the ticket as the basis, is interesting at this time.

In 1907, with the Democratic party badly split on the question of law and order, Hager received 609 votes and Wilson 897 for Governor, the white polls for that year being 1582 and the colored polls 874. Not voting 650.

In 1908, the same conditions prevailing, Bryan received for President 716 votes and Taft 1046, that being a Republican landslide year. The white polls were 1376 and colored 1064. Not voting 676.

In 1909, Salmon for Senator received 769 votes and Long, Republican, 908. The polls that year were 1482 white and 1163 colored. Not voting 998.

In 1910 there was no contest worth mentioning. Out of the few votes cast for congressman Stanley got 284 and R. J. Salmon, Rep. 332. The polls were 1309 white and 919 colored.

Since that election the Democratic party has been again united and has carried the city in every election for three years by increasing majorities. At the same time there has been a steady increase of the white and a decrease of the colored polls, the figures for 1913 being 1624 to 849.

In 1911, the Democrats carried the seven city precincts for Governor by 912 to 827.

In 1912, Wilson received 813, Taft 751 and Roosevelt 135, the Democrats holding their majority in a triangular contest.

In 1913, the Progressive vote apparently went largely to the Democratic ticket, the vote for state senator standing Salmon 996 and McLaughlin Republican 805—or a Democratic majority of 189.

The Republican party has ceased to be formidable and this is the best time to put the city in the third class, when party lines are not likely to be drawn. The Republicans have not attempted for many years to draw party lines in the city and even the Democrats have ceased to nominate the appointive officers in caucus, the apportionment of the spoils of office having become a matter of private agreement by a portion of the councilmen, sometimes entered into before their election.

There will be a concerted demand from the business interests of Hopkinsville for a proper classification of the city by the general assembly, regardless of the private interests of individuals. The people will make an issue that will be well defined.

HIGH PRICE

May Be Paid For Oranges By Robt. McJoy.

Yesterday morning Robert McJoy, a negro, was in the city court on the charge of breaking open a car of the Illinois Central railroad. Officer Hadden made the arrest. He caught the negro inside of the car, the seal of which had been broken, and the negro was devouring oranges with great gusto. It was charged that he broke open the box of oranges but there is no statement as to whether he had appropriated anything else. If the charges are substantiated McJoy's Christmas oranges will come high, as the first charge alone is sufficient to send him to the pen.

A number of useful and interesting articles appear in the January Strand. Dollar of 1804 Found.

A New Haven workman while digging a foundation found, with several other coins, a silver dollar coined in 1804 and worth $3500. Coin collectors say the dollar may be one of some counterfeits made in 1858, but all of the other coins with it bore dates before 1800. The coin belongs to the owner of the property under the law.

THE REX THEATRE

In Its Offerings This Week Presents Unusual Features.

I the way of blending the last days of the old year with the opening days of the new, Manager Shrode has secured a number of the best attractions he has ever offered his patrons. On the program today is a three-reel Eclair, entitled "Over The Cliff."

Wednesday they will give, "Time is Money," a two-reel Imp. William Shay and Miss Leah Baird have the leading roles. These two popular people appearing in anything is a guaranty that something far beyond good is on hand.

The bill for Thursday, "Chelsen 7750," is another great offering. The announcement that Henry E. Dixey takes the part of the great detective is sufficient to bring out a big crowd.

The grand climax of the week's entertainment comes for Friday and Saturday in the presentation of "The Last Days of Pompeii," in three acts, of two parts each. The general reader is familiar with the great story written by Lord Bulwer Lytton.

Nobody can afford to miss seeing it, as it will be the last opportunity here. It cost a quarter of a million dollars to produce it and 8,000 people were in the cast. The prices here will be only 10 and 20 cents.

RECEPTION AT CHURCH

Observing The Silver Wedding Anniversary of Dr. and Mrs. Thompson.

GOOD MUSIC AND SPEECHES.

Planned To Present The Pastor With a Trip, Perhaps Abroad.

The silver wedding anniversary of Rev. C. M. Thompson and Mrs. Thompson will be observed to-night, the following invitations having been issued:

The Sunday School invites your presence at the FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH on Tuesday, December thirtieth at eight p. m.

in honor of the marriage anniversary of the Pastor and his wife, Calvin Miles Thompson Clara Belle Morrison, 1888-1913.

Dr. Thompson has been pastor of the church for four years and its growth has been remarkable. The church membership is now nearly 1,000 and the Sunday School attendance often exceeds 500.

Dr. Thompson's Bible class presented him with a fine suit of clothes this month. A silver offering taken to-night will form the nucleus of a fund to give the pastor a trip, probably to Palestine.

There will be a musical program and brief speeches by a number of the members of the church. Refreshments will be served and there will be a general reception following the program.

STRANGE GIRL

Still Unable To Give Any Account Of Herself.

No change has taken place in the condition of the strange girl in the Western Hospital.

The girl was received on Dec., 14 from Union county, where she was found a few days prior in an old shed. She is suffering from an almost complete loss of mind and has never been able to give any coherent information about herself, though she has been questioned several times by the hospital physicians. She stated her name is Alma and that she had been traveling with a student named Jones, who had deserted her. She said that she had lived in New York but left there eight years ago and since has been living in the South. On her clothes the name "Justia" was found and some initials, but not enough to identify her. Her eyes are grey, hair brown and nicely cared for. She is five feet six inches tall and weighs 125 pounds, her figure is good, and she is attractive in appearance. So far absolutely no trace of her name or people has been discovered.

MAY ABANDON COUNTY LINES

Christian-Todd Telephone Company May Not Buy County Franchise.

RURAL LINES UNPROFITABLE

Intimation That The Company May Confine Its Business To Cities and Towns.

As a result of the decision of the Kentucky Court of Appeals, affirming the Christian Circuit Court in declaring that the Christian-Todd Telephone Company must purchase a franchise to continue business outside of the towns in which it holds franchises, the company may abandon its country business, which it is claimed, has never been profitable. This statement is made on authority of a high official of the telephone company.

The plan may be adopted of requiring the country lines which it is said are owned for the most part by farmers to pay for connection with the town exchanges. It is said that the poles, wires and other paraphernalia of the country lines will be offered at a figure approximating cost of the farmers' companies.

It is not believed that the company will ask for a franchise in the counties for local business.

Believe Flying Snakes Exist.
The belief in the existence of flying snakes is widely current in India, but few people profess to have seen them.
It would be interesting to find out how the legend came into existence.
These snakes are supposed to live on trees and make a flying dart at their victims. Snakes have been known to drop down trees and bite people but it is not these which are known as flying snakes in India.

HAD THOUGHT FOR MOTHER

Incident That Shows Small Boys Have Other Organs Beside Their Stomachs.

He was only a mite of a boy, dirty and ragged; and he had stopped for a little while in one of the city's free playgrounds to watch a game of ball between boys of his own and a rival neighborhood. Tatters and grime were painfully in evidence on every side; but the little fellow attracted the attention of a group of visitors, and one of them, reaching over the child's shoulder as he sat on the ground, gave him a luscious garden pear. The boy's eyes sparkled; but the eyes were the only thanks as he looked back to see from whence the gift had come and then turned his face away, too shy or too much astonished to speak.

But from that time on his attention was divided between the game and his new treasure. He patted the pear; he looked at it; and at last,
as if to assure himself that it was as delicious as it appeared, he lifted it to his lips and cautiously bit out a tiny piece near the stem. Then, with a long sigh of satisfaction and assurance, he tucked the prize safely inside his dirty blouse.

"Why don't you eat it, Tony?"
demanded a watchful acquaintance.
"Eat it? All meself? Ain't I savin' it for mother?"

The tone, with its mingling of resentment and loyalty, made further speech unnecessary. Whatever Tony lacked—and it seemed to be nearly everything—he had learned humanity's loftiest lesson. He had another dearer than self, and knew the joy of sacrifice.

But from the beginning to the end of the dinner he preserved a solemn and serious face. The host thought this very strange, and just before rising from the table remarked to him jestingly: "Why, O'Connor, old fellow,
I don't believe the biggest fool in Ireland could make you laugh to-

KEEPING ALWAYS AT WORK

Ceaseless industry in French
a Matter of Womankind American Visitor.

American visitors to France are amazed at the ceaseless industry of workers, especially women.

A resident of New York, returning a few days ago, enthusiastically described some of the surprising but admirable things in this line she witnessed in Paris.

The young woman who called for the washing had her knitting, and carried the basket on her back so that as she walked home she might ply the needles. Market women invariably were knitting and crocheting as they tended their stalls. "Our little maid of all work," said the observer, "kept her crocheting in the kitchen, and while the meals were cooking on the funny little gas stove she crocheted as though her life depended upon it, and, so far as I could see, neither the cooking nor the lace work suffered because of her divided attention. When the doorbell rang she walked down the little hall, still crocheting.

It is this form of industry and concentration which begets efficiency and, in larger relations, success as it is defined by the world. There is an impulse for conservation in almost every field. But the chief waste of the world always has been the waste of time.—Des Moines Register and Leader.

KNEW HER BUSINESS.

Old Mrs. Mayfield was interviewing an applicant for a position as cook.

"Can you make all kinds of soups, entrees and sweets?" she said.
"Oh, yes, ma'am," said the cook.
"Do you make a good mock-turtle soup?" was the next question.
"Oh, yes, mum."

Mrs. Mayfield was a little doubtful, perhaps on account of past experience.

"Tell me how you would set about it?" she asked suspiciously.

"Why, mum," said the cook, making a bold guess, "my way is to make a good, strong soup first with anything I happen to 'ave. Then, while it is on the boil, I throw the little mock turtles in, mum."

WHAT SPIDER INDICATED.

When Mark Twain, in his early days, was editor of a Missouri paper, a superstitious subscriber wrote to him saying that he had found a spider in his paper, and asking him whether that was a sign of good luck or bad. The humorist wrote him this answer and printed it:

"Old Subscriber: Finding a spider in your paper was neither good luck nor bad luck for you. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant is not advertising, so that he can go to that store, spin his web across the door and lead
a life of undisturbed peace ever afterward." — Pittsburgh Chronicle-

How "Teetotaler" Originated.
Teetotaler, the term applied to an abstainer from all fermented liquors, originated with Richard Turner, an artisan of Preston, England, who, contending for the principle at a temperance meeting in 1833, asserted that "Nothing but te-te-total will do." The word was immediately adopted.

To Commercialize Ben Nevis.

Silverware Makes An Ideal Gift

Whether you are contemplating a gift that cost little or much, Silverware is always acceptable. In buying Silverware it is well to choose standard makes—it is well to buy silverware from a store that is satisfied with a small margin of profit.

We believe that we can make more money by selling a great deal of silverware at a small margin of profit rather than an occasional piece at a big margin.

This principle—this belief accounts for our being able to sell the same silver for less money and better silver for the same money than you can buy elsewhere.

We ask the opportunity to show you what we have and how reasonable we can sell it.

Sea Serpent Attacks Boat.

Another sea serpent has been discovered, according to the officers of the Grand Trunk Pacific steamship Prince Albert. It was encountered by Indians at Skidegate, and is stated to have been 20 feet in length. The monster got hold of one of their canoes, but was dispatched by one of the chiefs, who slashed it in two with a large hunting knife.—Vancouver (B. C.) World.

All or None.

"I've come to ask you for your daughter's hand," faltered the young man, scratching his off shin with his right foot. "Can't have it!" snapped the stern parent. "I ain't in the installment business. When you can support the entire girl, then you can have her."

Nitrous acid gas (laughing gas) was first introduced into England on March 31, 1867.

When a Man is Careful.

A man will let you marry his daughter when he doesn't know your middle name. But if you give him a bone he'll examine it carefully to make sure there's no poison on it.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Religious Unity in India.

It is pointed out as an instance of moslem toleration in India that in one of the Oudh districts a Christian congregation worships every Sunday in a church erected at the expense of a fine old Mahomedan Taluqdar, the late Jung Bahadur of Narnana, in memory of his friend and ally, comrade Colonel Maynard, for many years district superintendent of police in that district.

To Keep Ice.

When it is desirable to keep ice in the sickroom, this will be found a very good plan: Get a large, wide-mouthed jar, tie a piece of coarse flannel over it, making it loose and bag-like in the center. Now put the ice in this bag and cover it with another piece of flannel, folded three or four times. It will keep better this way than by any other method. When you require to break it, use a coarse darning needle or a fine knitting needle, giving it a gentle tap with a hammer.

Life Need Not Be Narrow.

Our life is just as narrow as we let it be. If we live in a lonely country place miles from a railway, we can study the plants and animals about us until we come to understand something of the secrets of the universe. If our lot is in a great city, we have opportunities of studying human nature—seeing with our own eyes the development of characters as strange as ever novelist put into his books. Multitudes of men walked the same streets with Dickens without seeing a hundredth part of what he saw. It is the power to see, and not the object to be seen, that we lack, and this power may be, to a certain extent, cultivated by practice.—Exchange.

Few but those who have studied musical history know that the name John Bull was borne by one of the most famous musicians of the sixteenth century. He was as famous a harpsichord player in his day as Liszt was a pianist, but as a composer he lacked the creative power of Liszt, the result being that Bull is practically unknown to the general public today, even in England.

Where It Has the Advantage.

"The pen is mightier than the sword," said the ready-made philosopher. "I don't quite see how the adage applies to current conditions," commented the man with a practical mind. "It probably refers to the fact that the sword as now worn is entirely harmless, while a fountain pen can explode in a way that will ruin a $45 suit of clothes in five seconds."—Washington Star.

Care of Linoleum.

To improve linoleum that is beginning to show signs of wear. After the linoleum has been washed, without soap, and well dried, apply this dressing which gives a good gloss to the surface without making it slippery. Mix a gill of methylated spirits with an ounce of shellac, and when the shellac is dissolved apply to the linoleum with a soft flannel. It dries during the process of rubbing in, and keeps the polish, after it is washed.

To Clean a Sponge.

For sponges that have become slimy, it is found by treating them in the following manner makes them good as new: Get a basin, fill it with boiling water and a little washing soda, then put the sponge into this and leave it for several hours. When this is finished, rinse in plain hot water, afterwards rinsing in cold. Leave the sponge in the cold water until you are ready to use it again.

Weather For Week

Washington, Dec. 28.—The weather bureau says the weather will be fair during the next few days in practically all parts of the country.

"The next disturbance of importance to cross the country will appear on the north Pacific coast Monday or Tuesday attended by high winds and rains, and cross the great central valleys about Thursday and the eastern states Friday. This disturbance will cause local snows in the northern states. Another disturbance will reach the north Pacific coast about Thursday and prevail over the middle west near the end of the week. This disturbance will be attended by general rains and snows and be followed by decidedly colder weather."

SEE MUCH VALUE IN YAWNING

Authorities Declare That It Is Merely the Exercise of Proper, Useful Function.

Yawning is said to have an exceedingly healthful function besides having a salutary effect in complaints of the pharynx and the eustachian tubes. According to investigations yawning is the most natural form of respiratory exercise, bringing into action all the respiratory muscles of the neck and chest.

It is recommended that every person should have a good yawn with the stretching of the limbs morning and evening for the purpose of ventilating the lungs and tonifying the respiratory muscles. An eminent authority asserts that this form of gymnastics has a remarkable effect in relieving throat and ear troubles, and says that patients suffering from disorders of the throat have derived great benefit from it. He says he makes his patients yawn, by suggestion or imitation, or by a series of deep breaths with the lips partly closed. The yawning is repeated six or seven times and should be followed by swallowing. By this process the air and mucus in the eustachian tubes are aspirated.

"PEA SOUP" OF OLD LONDON

At Last Some One Has Come to the Defense of the Memorial Metropolitan Fog.

London and Londoners have been the butt of many a good joke, but perhaps the oldest subject of the humorist is the London fog. The mist, which is commonly called "pea soup," dates back to the seventeenth century. There are records as far back as that which indicate that the city suffered even in those days from mists as intense as any of those of today.

In November, 1699, Lord Evelyn made a note in his diary to the effect that there was "so thick a mist and fog that people lost their way in the streets, it being so intense that no light of candle or torches yielded any direction. Robberies are committed between the very lights which are fixed between London and Kensington on both sides and while coaches and passengers were passing. It began about four in the afternoon and was gone by night. At the Thames they beat drums to direct the watermen to make the shore."

Simple Pleasures.

To become again more joyous, more childlike, more naive than we are, to look into the world with clear eyes and to consign to the devil the problematical chimeras behind which only too often hides the unclean turmoil of the market place, chimeras which have made us unhappy, slavish and uncertain—that would do us all good.—Boston Transcript.

NEVER OUT OF SEASON

DESSERT OF CARAMELS ALWAYS IN ORDER.

Standby of the Hostess is This Delicious Confection—Many Methods of Serving It Have Been Put on Record.

Caramel is one of the delicious dessert flavors that are easy to prepare regardless of the season. For the reason caramel desserts are standbys winter and summer alike. A caramel cake can be as easily made when the markets are empty as when they are full. Here is a recipe for caramel cake: Mix two cupsful of butter until they are creamy. Sift three cupsful of flour with three teaspoonfuls of baking powder and add this, alternately with a cupful of vanilla, and add the stiffly beaten whites of four eggs. Bake the batter in layers and fill with caramel filling, made in this way: Mix two cupsful of brown sugar with a cupful of cream and add a teaspoonful of butter. Cook for three-quarters of an hour. When it is partly cool add two teaspoonfuls of vanilla.

This is another caramel filling: Boil three cupsful of brown sugar, half a cupful of condensed milk, a quarter of a cupful of water and a tablespoonful of butter for five minutes. Then take from the fire, add a teaspoonful of vanilla and heat until it thickens. Add three-quarters of a cupful of chopped pecan nut meats.

Cream caramel sauce is made by browning two rounded tablespoonfuls of granulated sugar and adding a cupful of cream to it, then stirring and cooking slowly until it is creamy.

Caramel Bavarian cream is made in this way: Put two tablespoonfuls of granulated sugar in a saucepan and brown it over a hot fire. Add a pint of cream to it, and grate and add the rind of a big lemon. Heat the cream until it has dissolved the caramel. Beat the yolks of six eggs and six tablespoonfuls of granulated sugar together and when it is creamy add it to the hot cream. Cook it over hot water until it is smooth and thick. Add four tablespoonfuls of granulated gelatin which has been dissolved and let the mixture cool. When it is cool, and is just beginning to set whip in a pint of stiffly whipped cream. Pour the mixture into a mold, chill and serve.

This is the way to make caramel custard: Cook four tablespoonfuls of sugar until it is a light brown. Pour it into a baking dish. Beat three eggs with three tablespoonfuls of sugar. Add a cupful and a half of cream or rich milk and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Pour it into the baking dish on top of the caramel. Bake in a pan of water until it is set. Instead of cooking this custard in a big dish, a little of the caramel can be put in each of half a dozen custard cups, and the custard mixture poured over it. Then they can be baked, and when they are done turned out on individual dishes. Serve cold.

Here is a recipe for caramel mousse: Melt half a cupful of sugar until it is dark brown and add a cupful of boiling water. Cook it slowly for 12 minutes and then add to it a level tablespoonful of granulated gelatin which has been soaking till it is soft. Cool the mixture and add a pint of thick cream, whip it stiff, and pack in a mold in ice and salt for three hours.

Bancroft Pudding.
Cream four tablespoons butter and one cup sugar and add one well beaten egg. Sift one and one-half cups flour with one-half teaspoon salt and one teaspoon baking powder. Add one-half cup of flour, to the first mixture, and beat thoroughly, then add the rest of the flour and one-half cup of milk, alternately. Finally beat one-quarter square chocolate into the batter and bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven.

Sauce—Beat two eggs until very light, then add one cup of confectioner's sugar and one cup of thick cream. Beat until the whole is the consistency of whipped cream.

Candied Sweet Potatoes.
Method—Pare some even-sized sweet potatoes and cut lengthwise into one-half-inch slices. Drop into hot water and boil ten minutes. Drain, place a layer in a flat buttered baking pan, season lightly with salt, pepper and a sprinkling of sugar, dot with butter and bake until tender and a golden color. While several layers can be baked in a pan, for the sake of keeping the slices whole, one layer in a large pan is best.

Aunt Sally's Pudding.
Crumb any or all kinds of stale cake quite fine. Stir the white of an egg with just enough cold water to moisten the crumbs, not allowing them to get too soft. Press this mixture into a well buttered mold, with a fitted cover; boil for one hour; turn out while hot and eat with hard or vanilla sauce.

Fried Celery.
Wash, scrape and cut celery into three-inch pieces, dip in batter and fry in deep hot fat. Serve with tomato sauce. For the batter mix one-half cup of bread flour, one-fourth teaspoon of salt, few grains of pepper, one-half cup milk and one egg well beaten.

When Boiling Potatoes.
Add a little milk to the water in which potatoes are boiled. It will prevent their turning dark and improve their flavor.

MAN-WITHOUT-A-NAME

By H. M. EGBERT.

Man-Without-a-Name looked up idly at the sound of voices. He was lying upon the beach at Quava-Quava, looking out at the ocean. He knew that, one hundred and fifty miles across that expanse of blue water, was the Pacific Group, and some day, perhaps, when he grew tired of Quava-Quava, he might go there. But he had lived on the beach at Quava-Quava for three years, and had not grown weary yet. Here one could live at ease, without working, without meeting one's kind, except under copper skins and speaking the soft syllables of Polynesian.

Of course, there were things that one liked to forget. There was Isabel, for instance, and her promise to wait for him "forever," as she had phrased it, when Man-Without-a-Name went west to see if he couldn't make a man of himself. But that was three years ago, and Man-Without-a-Name had grown tired of life and had given up the struggle.

Then there were compensations. Man-Without-a-Name could see wonderful pictures from this favorite spot of his. Sometimes he saw islands on the sea, and white-sailed ships, and natives riding on the surf, and shapely native women dancing before a temple. He liked to lie there by the hour and watch his pictures, creatures of his brain, but real as life.

Man-Without-a-Name looked up lazily. A tall, stout man was standing before him, looking down pleasantly at him. That was not unnatural, only this man happened to be white. What is more, he spoke English.

"Can you tell me the way to Schwarz's store?" he asked Man-Without-a-Name. "I went for a stroll through the jungle and got lost."

Man-Without-a-Name knew who the strange man was. He was the Permanent Under-Secretary at the State Department in Washington, and was on his way toward the Pacific Group to settle an important matter.

"Schwarz's store?" asked Man-Without-a-Name. "I will take you with pleasure."

"You speak like an American," said the Under-Secretary presently. "Would Watched the Vision With Eager Excitement.

I be making a wrong guess if I said that you are college man?" "A very good guess," answered Man-Without-a-Name. "I am of the Harvard class of '99."

"And you find life here pleasanter than in the States?" asked the Under-Secretary.

"It's pretty bad anywhere," said Man-Without-a-Name. "But here there is a chance of getting through it alone."

"If you were not so attached to Quava-Quava's beach, what would you like to be?" asked the other, a little later.

"United States consul at Quassia," said Man-Without-a-Name, with a grim smile.

They parted at Schwarz's store, where the Under-Secretary was staying over night. The gunboat which had carried him from Honolulu was lying in port. Man-Without-a-Name heard her captain tell the executive officer that they were going to inspect the other islands of the group before making their journey to the Pacific. Nobody spoke to Man-Without-a-Name. He was only a beachcomber, and every beach in the South Seas is full of them.

Man-Without-a-Name went back to his beach. He felt oddly disconcerted at the meeting with one of his kind. He always kept away from white men, and especially from Americans. They made him think of things that he had given up in the past, especially of Isabel, with her absurd promise to wait "forever." He had not written to her since he had left San Francisco three years before, and he had already been away from her two years then, when he threw up the fight.

Man-Without-a-Name drowsed on the beach through the warm, golden afternoon. He looked out over the waves, and suddenly, through the horizon's dancing heat waves, he saw his pictures appear.

If he had spoken about them to anybody he would have been called insane, or, more probably, an opium smoker; and yet opium was a vice from which Man-Without-a-Name had always kept free. And these pictures were amazingly real and lifelike. He was gazing now at a little harbor, which he had often seen before, and always in the same setting: the tall palms, with their drooping fronds; the little village of native huts; the tiny wharf and the fort, where two ancient guns pointed toward the east. Man-Without-a-Name was just as interested in watching this as though it had been real.

As he looked he saw a little gunboat creep in toward the harbor. A puff of white smoke leaped from her starboard side, and a cloud of earth rose from the side of the mud fort, whose two old guns also broke into smoke. Man-Without-a-Name watched this vision of his brain with eager excitement. This was as good as a play, this being able to see a real battle happening before his eyes.

The gunboat belched forth smoke again and again, and presently the little fort was a crumbling ruin. Then boats seemed to spring from the gunboat's side and pull toward the shore. And simultaneously, from the ruins of the fort appeared a flag.

It was the German flag, and it was impossible to be mistaken. No other flag looks like the German flag.

Suddenly Man-Without-a-Name was upon his feet. The breath came quickly between his lips. He knew now: he had been witnessing no fancy of his brain, but a mirage. Somewhere these things were happening; they were real things: a real fort, a real gunboat, a real bombardment. The pictures had always been real, and they were reflected across the expanse of dazzling water just as they might have been across a hundred and fifty miles of desert sand!

Man-Without-a-Name had forgotten everything except that his country needed this knowledge. She must act, and act at once: seize Quassia Island and oppose her forces there to the armed strength of Germany, or the South Pacific would become a German annex and America's prestige and power be lost.

Man-Without-a-Name ran for the first time in months. He ran with heaving sides, gasping for breath, but never stopping, till he reached Schwarz's store.

"I want to see the Under-Secretary," he gasped.

"You can't," said Schwarz stolidly. "De Onder-Secretary's lying down."

"I've got to see him, I tell you," shouted Man-Without-a-Name, and tried to break past the fat German's defense of the passageway. Schwarz caught him in his arms and tried to batter his head against the wall, and Man-Without-a-Name was getting the worst of the struggle, because, when you give up your name, you give up most of your manhood, too.

"Hello! What's the matter?" exclaimed a cool, crisp voice behind them.

"Dis Manmidout a Name has gone crazy from de head," puffed Schwarz. "He wanted to see you, and I wouldn't let him."

"I'll see him," said the Under-Secretary. "Let him go, Mr. Schwarz. Well, sir," he continued, "what has occurred to make you so interested in seeing me again?"

"The Germans are bombarding Tassia," panted Man-Without-a-Name, leaning heavily against the bar.

"Eh? What?" exclaimed the startled Under-Secretary.

"They bombarded the fort an hour ago," said Man-Without-a-Name, "and sent boats to take possession of the town. You'd better make Quassia by tomorrow night or you'll find them there, too."

"How do you know this?" demanded the Under-Secretary, looking at Man-Without-a-Name curiously.

But Man-Without-a-Name said nothing. He had come to a realization of the improbability of his story. If he said he had seen the bombardment, would he be believed?

"Trust me, sir, I know," said Man-Without-a-Name, and broke from the room and went back to his beach. But though they sought for him all through that afternoon they could not find him. Man-Without-a-Name hated white men more savagely than ever before.

"Well, Captain," said the Under-Secretary that night, "I suppose we can go over to Quassia and leave our survey of Quava-Quava until we return? Of course, I don't believe this madman's story, but still—"

"As you wish, sir," answered the Captain.

That is how we came to occupy Quassia Island an hour before the German gunboat arrived off the harbor. The Under-Secretary did not forget. When he came back to Quava-Quava he took a stroll along the beach alone and found Man-Without-a-Name flinging pebbles into the sea.

"I want you to tell me how you knew," he said. And Man-Without-a-Name told him, and more besides.

"Hey, Man-Midoud-a-Name," yelled Schwarz one morning, four months later, "here's a letter for you by de boat."

It was addressed simply "Man-Without-a-Name, Quava-Quava." But each of the three missives inside was addressed to Mr. James Van Riebeck. He tore open the first, and then, without reading it, glanced through the second and third. The first was from Isabel. The Under-Secretary had not done "things by halves."

"In the future, Schwarz, you will address me as Mr. Van Riebeck," said Man-Without-a-Name to the hotel-keeper.

"Himmel," exploded Schwarz. "You got a name now, hey?"

"I have to," answered the other. "I've got to share it. I'm going home for six months' leave before assuming the consulship at Quassia—and, you see, I'm going to be married."

SCHEME TO LURE RECRUITS

British Military Authorities Use "Ragtime" Airs to Secure Men for Ranks.

Recruiting by ragtime is the latest device of the British military authorities to attract men to the army and fill up gaps in the ranks. It is apparently held that, despite some diminution in military dignity, the enthralling strains of "Hitchy Koo" and other music-hall classics are more likely to lure the civilian into the army than the other time-honored methods. In consequence of the adoption of this amazing plan by the authorities at Fulwood barracks, Preston, a remarkable scene was witnessed the other day in that town. The largest firm of cotton manufacturers in the world, recently visited by the king and queen, pour their thousands of workers into the streets at noon. At such a time the band of the Lloyd North Lancashire regiment played ragtime and other popular music in the square, attracting a large crowd. About seventy officers and men searched for recruits. They distributed circulars and picture postcards, giving photographs of men of various regiments and giving the scale and pay and conditions of life in the barracks. The response was only moderate, however, but this novel military campaign will be continued in Blackburn and East Lancashire towns, into which the battalion will be sent.

THESE DAYS

Mrs. Jigson—Mrs. Ketchum always married well, didn't she?
Mrs. Wigson—She always divorced much better. She has accumulated quite a fortune from her alimony.

SETTLED THE FLIRT.

A street car flirt tried in every way to attract the attention of the pretty young girl opposite him. Just as he had a about given up, the girl, entirely unconscious of what had been going on, happened to glance in his direction. The first immediately took fresh courage.

"It's cold out today, isn't it?" he ventured.

The girl smiled and nodded assent, but had nothing to say.

"My name is Specknoodle," he volunteered.

"Oh, I am so sorry," she said, sympathetically, as she left the car.

INSANE FROM NURSE'S STORIES.

An attempt of Howard Goodrich to kill himself with chloroform was frustrated by a telephone message of Roger Baldwin, secretary of the Civic league, asking hotel authorities to watch the young man.

In the observation ward at the City hospital he was said to have an incurable mental affliction, which physicians believe had its origin in fright caused in childhood by a nurse's stories of a "boogey man."—St. Louis Star.

HE STAKES HIM.

"Yes, indeed, times have greatly changed in the last few years."

"I suppose so. For instance?"

"Well, for instance. A once autocratic plumber up in my neighborhood now goes to the haughty butcher around the corner to borrow money to keep his business alive."

COMPARISONS.

"I have been told," said Gladys, "that I have a swanlike throat."

"It was something like a swan's," replied her father. "But since you went to the country and got all those freckles it looks more like a giraffe's."—Washington Star.

EARLONS SAW PHANTOM SHIP

At Least That is the Assertion, but Men of the Sea Are Notoriously Superstitious.

According to Capt. J. A. Durkee of the four-masted steel bark Annie M. Reid, which has arrived in Philadelphia from Adelaide, via Queenstown, his ship made a record passage out from Montevideo to the Anstranlian coast in 38 days. Her average for the passage was 250 miles a day, and on four days she made 370 miles
a day.

Between the cape of Good Hope and the island of St. Helena, Captain Durkee said, the ship was struck by a squall, which carried away her mizzen topsail. The same night the officer on the poop reported a strange ship bearing down upon the sailing ship at considerable speed. She looked like a big freighter with her lights burning, the captain said, but no one could be seen on her decks or on the bridge. The Annie M. Reid burned rockets, but there was no response, and the steamer passed about an eighth of a mile astern.

The crew believed that they had seen a phantom ship, as the superstition still holds among sailors regarding the ships which have gone down near the cape of Good Hope, that they, like Vanderdecken, are still trying to weather it.

FLY TRAPS IN CITY STREETS

Redlands, Cal. Found Them of Advantage, and Will Continue to Use Them.

At the first street corner was noticed a curious object, which proved,
on close inspection, to be a screened frame twelve inches square and over two feet high, about the size of a big, square waste basket. It was a fly cage. The bottom sat about two inches from the ground. In this bottom was a cone-shaped screen with the large opening down. Under this was placed a banana peel or other fly delicacy. Investigation demonstrated that the pests go under the screen, and, the light being from above, fly up into the cone, and thence through the small hole into the cage. Naturally it would take a rather smart fly to find that little hole again and get out. Flies instinctively fly up and toward the light, so that cage, with no effort whatever, catches flies by the thousands.

It is so complete that the duties of the municipal fly catcher consist simply in daily baiting the traps, collecting the flies and burning them.
According to the report he filed at the end of his first month in office, September, 1912, he killed 2,750,000
flies.—Christian Herald.

SUPPOSITION.

"You are supposed to know all

iff, the Monroe doctrine and a number of other things," said the young but, fortunately, I didn't have to pass any civil service examination."

in silence.)—London Opinion.

THE CAREFUL WAITER.

bill of fare?
Waiter—There was, sir, but I wiped it off.—California Pelican.

ACCIDENTS ON GOLF LINKS

Easy to Avoid, and Experts Will Not Need the Advice Here Tendered.

The Journal of the American Medical association calls attention to accidents that frequently occur during the play of the ancient and honorable game of golf. Don't look back on the golf field. When "fore!"
is called look the other way and lean forward, as it is less dangerous to be hit on any other part of the body than the head. A frequent source of eye accidents on the golf field is the reckless swinging of clubs in making practice shots when near other players. Such practice should be confined to remote places where there will be no injury to others.
Eyes are frequently injured by being struck with foreign bodies, such as sand and gravel flying off the end of a club. "Within the last two or three years," says the Journal, "quite a number of serious accidents have occurred from the opening of golf balls to ascertain their contents.
Most balls contain no fluid, but there are balls wherein will be found acids, held there under high pressure, so that when opened by a knife, hatchet or what not, the acid squirts out. Not infrequently, the eyes and face have been severely burned. The acid is supposed to give the ball greater resiliency and carrying power, but its use is dangerous.
Do not cut open golf balls, to see what they are made of, or for any other reason."

A DIFFERENCE

Mrs. Naylor—I hear that you are breaking in a new cook.
Mrs. Wyatt—Well—er—we have a new cook, but she's doing most of the breaking.

RUBBER PLANTS IN WINTER.

Rubber plants need much light through the winter season, but the temperature for them should not exceed 55 degrees, as it is not desirable that they should put forth new leaves in winter. Owing to the cold and scanty light of the short days leaves put forth then would always be small and spindling.
Century plants will thrive in the atmosphere of the sitting room or kitchen, if not profusely watered.
Defective leaves should be removed half an inch below the decaying part,
and the cut treated with powdered charcoal.

AVOIDING THE TEST.

"Perkins believes that a man's character can be determined by his handwriting."
"I don't remember seeing any of Perkins' handwriting."
"No, Perkins always uses a typewriter."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

HIS ALIBI.

"It seems to me that I have heard you sing somewhere sometime?"
"Nope, not me. I was never drunk in my life."

THE LIMIT.

Gabe—Grubber is certainly an easy mark, isn't he?
Steve—Should say so. Why, he even believes the statistics he reads.

PROVED IT.

Muggins—Longfellow boasts that he never tells the truth.
Ruggins—Don't you believe him.
He's an infernal liar.

A SUBSTITUTE.

"Why are you putting that gasoline on your coat?"
"Sh! That's to make the folks believe I've been out automobiling."

EXACTLY.

"So the judicial idea now is to substitute the knife for the sentence in sentencing crime?"
"Oh, cut it out!"

Worth While in Reading.
Some one has suggested that a certain time set apart each Sunday shall be devoted to reading with a purpose.
Not just a book picked up at random,
and another on quite a different topic when that is finished. At the end of winter little definite mental advance is made from such a method. This winter take books relating, say, to one country, or to a painter and his pictures, or to any definite subject that attracts you, and read on that subject for even one or two hours each Sunday. In three months there will be definite mental results.

Why Do They Do This?
Miss Primp (who is forty-one)—
"Yes, I was thirty only last week.
Think of it!" The Caller (aged thirty-seven, with charming insincerity)—
"Dear me. I couldn't have guessed you were more than four years my senior. I will be twenty-five next month."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

mind to begin the publication of a daily paper, but finally repurchased The South Kentuckian from Mr. Wilson, who retired from the business.

He continued to publish the paper as an 8-col. folio until January 11th, 1890, when the pruning knife was again applied to the name of the paper and the name became as it is today, "Hopkinsville Kentuckian." In 1904 it was changed from a semi-weekly to a tri-weekly.

In the fall of 1894, The Kentuckian moved into its own home on South Main street.

This history of the oldest newspaper in Hopkinsville would not be complete without mentioning the fact that during the Spanish-American war The Kentuckian put on a daily morning edition until the close of the war.

NEW ERA.

For four years and over the "Conservative" had a complete monopoly of the newspaper business and a big part of the job printing of this territory, several counties surrounding Christian sending their business here. The rough edges of the war had begun to wear off when a young lawyer by the name of A. G. Caruth came here to practice. He saw a good opening for another newspaper and succeeded in interesting Col. Jno. D. Morris in starting it. The name of the paper was to be "The Hopkinsville Democrat" and the present New Era came within about five minutes of being something else. The prospectus of the Democrat was already in type and was ready for the press, when Mr. Caruth ran up the steps leading to the second story of T. M. Jones' store, with his hat in his hand, his auburn locks flying as he cried out "Change the name of the paper to New Era. This is a new era in politics, and that is the name of our paper agreed upon."

In March, 1910, Wallis, Clark & Ferguson leased the plant of the defunct "Messenger," a Republican paper, which had a precarious existence of six or eight years, finally dying of inanition after several changes of ownership.

The third Democrat was started and enjoyed prosperity for its brief existence of four or five months, but eventually the vital spark, called cash, went out, disproofing beyond all controversy, the trite say that "the third time is the charm." There was no charm about it, and the plant, after being idle for two and a half years was sold.

The Democrat, which recently suspended, was the fourth paper of that name to be published in Hopkinsville.

Familiar Conjurer's Tricks Explained.

The question of how it is done is always uppermost in the minds of the people who have spent an afternoon or evening watching a conjurer do tricks. JAS. R. RIDGEWAY Victim of Tuberculosis in Den- ver Last Saturday.

James R. Ridgeway died at Denver, Col., at noon Saturday of tuberculosis, aged 26 years. The body was expected to arrive in Louisville yesterday for interment, accompanied by his young widow, to whom he was married last spring.

The funeral will be held tomorrow at the home of his mother, Mrs. Jas. A. Ridgeway, 1720 Duncan street, Louisville.

Mr. Ridgeway was a buyer for the American Tobacco Co. in this city when stricken with the fatal malady about two years ago. He gave up his place here and went to Colorado, where it was believed he had been greatly benefited. Reports came that he had gained much flesh and had gone into business in Denver. Last spring he came back here on a visit and appeared to be rapidly regaining his health. Shortly after his return, his fiancée, Miss Smithson, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Smithson, of Church Hill, while on a western trip, was married to him at the residence of Mr. W. C. Doherty, in Denver.

His Hopkinsville friends were shocked Saturday to learn of his death, as there had been no news of a relapse.

Mr. Ridgeway was a young man of fine business qualities and was rapidly rising in his chosen field of endeavor when his health failed. He was a member of the Hopkinsville Lodge of Elks and was at one time an officer in the Lodge.

His widow will return to this county in the near future.

WORD-HANBERY.

Popular Young Couple to Be Married This Afternoon.

The marriage of Mr. R. T. Word, Jr., of Beverly, and Miss Susie E. Hanbery, of this city, will be solemnized this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride, 1311 South Henry street, by Rev. C. M. Thompson, of the First Baptist Church.

Only relatives and a few of the most intimate friends of the young people will witness the ceremony.

Shortly after the marriage the couple will be driven to Beverly, where an elegant reception will be held at the home the groom's father, Mr. R. T. Word, Sr.

The bride-to-be is a daughter of Mr. D. W. Hanbery, carrier on Route No. 3, and is quite pretty. She enjoys a wide popularity, numbering her friends by the hundred. Mr. Word is a well known and prosperous young farmer of the Beverly neighborhood and is exceedingly popular with every one.

The young people will reside near Beverly.

The January Wide World Magazine.

The January Wide World—"The Magazine for Men," as the proprietors now call it—is an excellent number. Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell—Grenfell of Labrador—the famous medicine missionary describes his life work in Labrador, and tells of his hardships and suffering while living among the simple fishermen. Another article of exceptional interest and illustrated with the most wonderful series of photographs as we have seen for some time, is entitled, "An Underground World of Wonders," and describes the marvelous caves of Western Australia. A. E. Pratt writes of his trip Across the Andes and Down the Amazon, and Mervyn G. Skipper gives realistic description of a "Javan Rattan Fight." "The Romance of Oil" will be read with much interest by all who have followed the spectacular career of Californian "Pete." Thrilling stories of real experiences include "His Last Bear," "That Christmas Bullfight," "The Pirates of Penang," "The Cave of Death," and many other stories which the majority of the red-blooded men will appreciate. The Wide World is certainly a remarkable publication.

Midget Baby.

DuQuoin, Ill., Dec. 26.—What is thought to be the smallest baby ever born in this section of the state has just arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Isom Brown at Christopher, east of this city. The infant barely tipped the scales at two and one-fourth pounds, yet it appears perfectly well.

Prizes for Good Menus.

The patient housewife who is trying to cater to the needs of her family on a moderate income has to solve daily the same old problem. "What shall I cook for breakfast, for luncheon, for dinner?" The very monotony of the question gets on one's nerves, and there is a lot of real difficulty in planning a wholesome variety for each day. The Chicago Record-Herald has mercifully come to the aid of puzzled housewives by printing in each issue a set of three menus, with receipts under the title, "Meals for a Day." What is more, it gives for cash prizes every week for the best of these menus, and women all over the country are invited to compete. The terms of the award and names of the latest winners may be found in any Monday's issue of The Chicago Record-Herald. That is the day, too, when the "Martha's Management" column appears with its helpful hints and advice to cooks and housekeepers. In the Sunday issue a whole page is now filled with the splendid new feature known as "The People's Institute of Domestic Economy." This also includes Emily Riesenbergs famous groups of recipes, each group giving many different ways of cooking one kind of food. The beautiful embroidery pattern each Sunday is itself, worth double the price of the whole paper. Women not familiar with the prize feature of The Record-Herald should investigate it at once. Many have found it a handy means of getting fresh ideas and obtaining cash for those they already have.
